The Honors College

Cynthia Jackson-Elmoore, DEAN

The Honors College at Michigan State University serves academically talented, committed students who wish to pursue and achieve academic excellence. The college strives to ensure an enriched academic, social and cultural experience for its members and create an environment that fosters active, innovative learning. It emphasizes individualized program planning rather than a tightly prescribed set of courses. Honors College members have the opportunity and are encouraged to design their own individualized programs of study; enroll in dynamic Honors classes, interactive seminars, and graduate courses; participate in faculty-led research projects; and join with other Honors College students who share their curiosity and enthusiasm to enjoy the intimacy of a small college along with the advantages of a major research university.

Organization

Honors course work and academic advising are designed to strengthen individual Honors College members’ associations with their respective major departments or schools.

The Dean and staff of the Honors College are responsible for fostering the development of appropriate Honors course work, and for coordinating the system of faculty honors advising throughout the university. They also work directly with Honors College students on many aspects of their individual programs. Staff advisors assist students in discovering special opportunities to enliven and enrich their undergraduate experiences, in exploring different fields of concentration, in pursuing multiple interests, and in making special arrangements and accommodations to help students take fullest advantage of Michigan State University’s rich intellectual resources.

Requirements for Membership

Incoming Students: The Honors College invites prospective Michigan State University students to be members on the basis of nationally standardized test scores and outstanding high school achievement. Honors College members are expected from the outset to pursue broader and more rigorous programs of study than other freshmen.

Current Students: Admittance to the Honors College is by invitation only. The admission process begins early each spring semester and closes by the end of February. At the beginning of each spring semester, the Honors College will target the top 10 percent of first-year students in each college (based on cumulative GPA at the end of the fall semester) and examine each student’s record for evidence of academic excellence. In addition, successful and sustained involvement in one of MSU’s key enrichment programs will also be taken into consideration as this participation indicates a student’s interest in personal growth and academic achievement. Invitations will be sent to students’ MSU email accounts through the Confidential Message System maintained by the Office of the Registrar. The annual review process that occurs each spring semester will include all first-year students who have been at MSU for one calendar year or less. The Honors College at MSU is designed as a four-year experience, and current students will only be reviewed for admission during their first year at MSU. Students who decline a membership invitation or who are not invited to membership as part of the annual review process will not be considered in future reviews. Students who are not invited to Honors College membership may still enhance their educational experience through Honors Options in regular courses or by requesting an override into a specific Honors course/section (overrides are granted based on availability. and a review of students' overall academic progress and program). Students may also graduate from the university with honor (top 7-20 percent) or high honor (top 6 percent) designations by meeting cumulative GPA standards, regardless of Honors College membership.

Transfer Students: Admittance to the Honors College is by invitation only. All transfer students who have been at MSU for one calendar year or less are automatically included in the annual review process each spring semester, which targets the top 10 percent of first-year students in each college (based on cumulative GPA at the end of the fall semester) and examines each student's record for evidence of academic excellence. Invitations will be sent to students' MSU email accounts through the Confidential Message System maintained by the Office of the Registrar. The MSU Honors College is designed as a four-year experience, and membership is not available to students who will reach junior standing (56 credits) by the end of the spring semester in which their record is reviewed. Students who are not invited to Honors College membership may still enhance their educational experience through Honors Options in regular courses or by requesting an override into a specific Honors course/section (overrides are granted based on availability and a review of students' overall academic progress and program). Students may also graduate from the university with honor or high honor designations by meeting cumulative GPA standards, regardless of Honors College membership.

Continuing Membership: To remain in good standing, Honors College students must maintain a minimum university grade-point average of 3.20; complete an Academic Progress Plan for each year; demonstrate progress toward completing eight Honors experiences by completing at least three by the end of the second year; and use the enhanced academic resources available.

Basic Features of the Program

In fulfilling the expectation for an enriched program of study, a student may use a combination of the various types of Honors opportunities available. Honors College members are not required to take a specific set of courses to satisfy the university's general education requirements, freeing them to select from among the university's vast advanced course offerings. Members may major in any area and participate in Honors experiences as a way to enhance all components of their college education. Among the many resources available to Honors College members are those described below:

Honors Courses and Sections: These classes aim at a more rigorous examination of the subject matter, are limited and selective in enrollment, and provide a stimulating intellectual atmosphere.

Honors Options: In many courses, students may earn Honors credit by completing Honors-caliber study and/or academic service learning experiences with special guidance from the instructor.

Honors Research and Independent Study: Honors College members may earn Honors credit for research, thesis, or independent study projects. Students engage in research through the Professorial Assistant Program, Honors Research Seminars, independent study, Honors College research abroad programs, or research appointments with faculty. The Honors College Research Fund provides small grants on a competitive basis to support faculty-sponsored undergraduate research projects.

Graduate Courses: Honors College students have the opportunity to enroll in graduate courses with the approval of their advisors and their course instructors. Many do so during the senior year, and some during the junior year or even earlier, often in substitution for advanced undergraduate courses in their fields.

Credit earned in graduate courses is applied toward the student's undergraduate degree unless he or she obtained prior approval to be dually enrolled and was admitted to a graduate program before enrolling in the courses. For more information, refer to the Dual Enrollment by Undergraduates statement in the Graduate Education section of this catalog at www.reg.msu.edu/AcademicPrograms/Print.asp?Section=328.

International Engagement: Honors College members have the opportunity to participate in unique research-intensive study abroad programs sponsored by the Honors College in addition to the University's many other study abroad offerings. The Honors College international engagement programs offer a flexible curriculum individually built around each student's academic needs.

Other Membership Benefits

A number of special opportunities are provided to support the mission of the Honors College, namely, the pursuit of academic excellence.

(a) Academic Advising: In addition to departmental Honors College advisors, members are served by full-time academic advisors in Eustace-Cole Hall, who are available by appointment to help with program planning. Honors College advisors approve general education course proposals and make record of general education substitutions. They can assist with choice of major, and with exploration of possibilities outside members' field of study, such as selection of additional majors, minors, or second degrees.

(b) Enrollment Priority: In order to implement the academic programs planned by Honors College students and approved by their advisors, the class enrollment system grants rising second year and higher Honors College members enrollment priority in Honors and regular courses. Enrollment priority is especially helpful in gaining admission to upper-level courses and scheduling when only single sections are offered.

(c) Scholarships: In addition to scholarships awarded by the university to incoming students, Honors College members are eligible to apply for a variety of scholarships administered by the college for continuing students.

(d) Priority Admission to Limited Enrollment Programs: A student who enters the Honors College with a major preference in a limited enrollment program may be granted admission to the chosen major, provided that the student is an Honors College member in good standing and meets the standard admission requirements of the degree-granting college and the department or school of the major.

(e) Co-curricular Opportunities: Honors College students can take advantage of a wide array of student activities and organizations to build connection to the College and important leadership and professional skills. The College also sponsors numerous programs that foster students' strong relationships with faculty, administrators, and community partners.

(f) Graduation Recognition: Graduating members of the Honors College are given special recognition in the commencement program. In addition, an Honors College designation is recorded on their transcript and diploma. The requirements to graduate as a member of the Honors College can be found on the Honors College Web site at http://honorscollege.msu.edu/graduation-requirements-and-recognition.

(g) Graduate/Professional School Planning: The Honors College can assist its members in preparing for graduate school applications and fellowship support. The Honors College also serves as the campus liaison office for many major national and international fellowship competitions (e.g.,

(h) Eustace-Cole Hall: The Honors College is housed in a historic building conveniently located at the confluence of East and West Circle Drives. In addition to staff offices, this facility provides lounge and study space for members, and rooms for Honors seminars.

(i) Honors Housing: Designated space is available on special Honors floors within the campus residence hall system. Honors housing provides a study-oriented living situation conducive to lively social and intellectual exchange.

The Academic Scholars Program

Michigan State University offers the Academic Scholars Program to students who are not initially invited to join the Honors College. Such students may be interested in pursuing a two-year enrichment program and may be invited to join the Honors College during their first year. Participants in this program have the opportunity to take Honors sections of Integrative Studies courses and have access to some Honors courses and sections. The program includes a residential option similar to that offered Honors College members. The requirements to graduate as a member of the Academic Scholars Program can be found on the Honors College Web site at www.msu.edu/~asp/requirements.html.
