ELI BROAD COLLEGE OF BUSINESS

1. Request to establish a Master of Science degree in Customer Experience Management in the Department of Marketing. The University Committee on Graduate Studies (UCGS) recommended approval of this request at its October 18, 2021 meeting.
   a. Background Information:

   Customer Experience Management (CXM) is a business imperative for most organizations, whether for-profit or non-profit, public or private. Globally, over 17 million people self-identify on LinkedIn as working in the customer experience field. The business press is replete with articles on the importance of customer experience. In a recent survey, Gartner (2017) found that 81% of organizations plan to compete mostly or completely on the basis of customer experience within the next few years. In a 2019 survey, CX was found to drive over two-thirds of customer loyalty, outperforming brand and price combined (Gartner 2019 CX Management Survey).

   There is a growing number of leadership positions in CX, with many organizations declaring their commitment to CXM by hiring leaders to drive it. Around 90% of organizations have a CXO (Chief Experience Officer) or CCO (Chief Customer Officer) today, compared to 60% two years ago (Gartner 2019 CX Management Survey).

   Despite the prominence of CX, there are currently no graduate programs in CXM in North America (there are three programs in Europe). CXM draws from a variety of disciplines, including consumer insights, sales, advertising, human resources, and supply chain management. This wide array of fields leaves many practitioners with significant gaps in their skill sets.

   There is a substantial demand from both working professionals and their employers. In a Summer 2020 survey of Working Professionals, 85% are interested in a master’s degree in customer experience management. The same study found that of 160 Decision Makers, 78% of USA companies and 89% of international companies are likely to hire students graduating from the program (survey conducted by the Broad Department of Marketing 2020). At this time there is no program like this, at either the graduate or undergraduate level, in North America.

b. Academic Programs Catalog Text:

The Master of Science degree in Customer Experience Management prepares individuals for careers in customer experience management. The degree can be completed in one calendar year (full-time) or twenty months (part-time). The program is specifically designed to develop skills in organizational development and change, understanding customers and employees, experience design and innovation, employee experience and engagement, and data analytics and continuous improvement technical skills. The program is available only online.

In addition to meeting the requirements of the university and of the Eli Broad College of Business and Graduate School of Management, students must meet the requirements specified below.

Admission

For admission to the master's degree program in customer experience management on regular status, the student must:

1. Submit to the Department of Marketing a completed application packet that is available from the department.
2. Have a bachelor’s degree from a recognized educational institution.
3. Have a grade-point average of at least 3.00 in the last two years of undergraduate work.
4. Take the Graduate Management Admission Test (GMAT) and have the scores submitted to the Master of Science in Customer Experience Management program. The test must be taken not more than five years prior to the submission of the application for admission to the program. The GMAT score may be waived based on previous work experience.

Admission to the program is competitive, and meeting the minimum standards listed above does not guarantee admission. The applicant’s overall record is considered including letters of recommendation, the student’s statement of objectives, work experience, extra-curricular activities, and TOEFL scores (for international students). Admission is also subject to space availability.

Prior to enrollment in the Master of Science degree in Customer Experience Management, the student must have:

1. a working knowledge of personal computers including word processing, spreadsheets, networking, and database management systems.

3. Request to establish a Master of Science degree in User Experience in the Department of Media and Information. The University Committee on Graduate Studies (UCGS) recommended approval of this request at its October 18, 2021 meeting.

a. Background Information:

As the world grows increasingly dependent on new technologies, the need has never been greater to create user-centered and socially responsive interactive technologies, applications, and information systems for diverse populations. Technology is an integral part of everyday life, touching every aspect of how people learn, work, and play. With the fast pace of technology innovation, information technology is transforming the world around us, from cars to travel, from games for learning and social change to entertainment, from enterprise-level information systems to personal mobile apps for health and wellness. Further, how we interact with technology is becoming critically important for businesses to understand, making the study of the relationship between humans and computers one of the most dynamic and significant fields of technical investigation.

User experience (UX) refers to any interactions users have with the company and their products, systems, or services. UX design considers all the different elements that shape those experiences by focusing on humans and their needs, as well as business goals and objectives during the design process to create user-centered and socially responsive interactive technologies, applications, and information systems that are effective, efficient, and easy-to-use. The future of computing lies in understanding and creating innovative, high-quality designs through human-computer interaction research and principles integrated with user-centered design (ISO, 2010), user research, usability evaluation, information architecture, information science, user interface design, interaction design, visual design, content strategy, accessibility, web analytics, and project management (usability.gov). Taken together, UX professionals are valuable assets for businesses: they can identify how end users are currently using a product, enhance designs, collaboratively develop new products to best meet the needs of their users, and adapt to emergent social and technological settings. UX is about determining when and where design is appropriate and needed, how to develop and maintain technological systems, and how to appropriately consider the ecologies around technology use, including their relevance to other technologies, materials and social embeddedness.

With the rise in digital technologies, the strategic role of UX in enhancing an organization's competitive advantage has grown exponentially. The business case for enterprise UX is compelling; success stories highlight excellent return on investment (ROI). According to the 2019 State of UX Enterprise Survey, 70% of enterprise CEOs see UX and customer experience as a competitive differentiator, 88% reported that customer mapping (mapping customer behavior across all touchpoints) had a positive impact on their product offerings by increasing retention rates, increasing lifetime value, increased sales, and reducing customer service calls.[4]-[5] Now more than ever, marketplace success depends on being able to offer innovative, user-centered, and socially responsive products that meet the needs, desires, and expectations of diverse users.

UX professionals are in great demand as design and thought leaders because companies, governments, and other organizations have recognized the benefits of institutionalizing user-centered design best practices, and are integrating user-centered design, usability, and accessibility standards into their design and development processes. Careers in UX rank highly in several lists of top high-paying careers and UX professionals have excellent earning potential. The User Experience Professionals’ Association reported the median salary is $95,000 for UX professionals in 2018. [6] The Nielsen Norman Group (highly-regarded in UX circles) found starting salaries in UX design are about $67,000 (in 2019-dollars) for entry-level salaries and about $95,000 within five years. [7] The Onward Search Salary Guide 2019 indicates UX designer salaries range from $67,300 to $93,700 (average salary $80,500) and a UX/UI Manager can command between $98,400 and $151,200 (average salary $124,800). According to Glassdoor’s 50 Best Jobs in America 2018 report, a UX designer’s median base salary is $90,000 while a UI developer comes in at $95,000 [9]. Similarly, the Creative Group Salary Guide 2018 gives UX designer salary ranges from $77,400 to $114,700, while UX researchers can expect between $70,500 and $96,200, and UX manager salaries range from $99,700 to $153,300 [10].
The Department of Media and Information has long been researching and teaching a variety of courses about the relationship between information and communications technologies and the people, communities, institutions, and governments that interact with them. Following the global iSchool movement, of which the Department of Media and Information is a member, we are assembling a new set of courses into this User Experience (UX) major to train a new class of professionals who both understand the way modern technologies are designed, but also how those technologies influence and shape people, groups, communities, organizations, governments, and society.

Currently, there are no traditional, online, or hybrid master's programs at Michigan State that offer this collection of topics and whose goal is to provide educational development to information professionals to work at the intersection of cutting-edge technology and social change as user experience practitioners. A small number of online or hybrid master’s programs have content that crosses over into core content areas in the college, such as the Master of Arts degree in Digital Rhetoric and Professional Writing in the College of Arts and Letters along with WRA 482 Information and Interaction Design; the Master of Arts degree in Program Evaluation in the College of Social Science along with PSY 882 Evaluation Data Collection Methods, but no program has more than one course with similar content in common to the proposed Master of Science degree in User Experience, as the foundational perspectives are different.

The main competitor in Michigan is the University of Michigan, which offers a traditional MS program in Information that has a UX/HCI concentration; however, it is not designed or offered as a completely online, asynchronous program. There are also a small number of online programs nationally, mostly from non-peer institutions.

b. Academic Programs Catalog Text:

The Master of Science degree in User Experience program will prepare students for many kinds of careers in human-computer interaction, user experience design, and human-centered research. The online Master of Science in User Experience program is designed to accelerate career prospects of early and mid-career professionals for leadership roles within information technology environments. The program will provide advanced user experience design training that integrates foundational human-computer interaction (HCI) knowledge with industry-relevant methods and social responsibility, which are necessary in the dynamic, agile IT development environment of the 21st century global workplace.

Admission to the Internship Year Studies Program

The section on admission to the Internship Year Studies Program pertains to all students who complete the requirements for a bachelor's degree at another educational institution, or who complete the requirements for a bachelor's degree at Michigan State University without having been admitted to the Teacher Certification Program.

The number of students admitted to the Internship Year Studies Program is established by the university. Enrollment in the program is limited. The criteria and procedures for the selection of students for admission to the Internship Year Studies Program are established by the College of Education.

Requirements for the Internship Year Studies Program

1. All of the following Professional Education Courses (24 credits):

Students with a music education disciplinary major must complete approved alternative courses in lieu of Teacher Education 501, 502, 801, 802, 803, and 804.

Students with a special education disciplinary major who are seeking both teacher certification and endorsement in learning disabilities must complete Counseling, Educational Psychology and Special Education 502A, 801A, 802A, 803A, and 804A in lieu of Teacher Education 502, 801, 802, 803, and 804. Those courses contain disciplinary content, as well as pedagogical content. Therefore, those courses are also counted toward the requirements for endorsement in the area of learning disabilities. Students who completed Teacher Education 502, 801, 802, 803, and 804 and who are seeking endorsement in learning disabilities must complete Counseling, Educational Psychology and Special Education 502A, 801A, 802A, 803A, and 804A.

Internship Placements

Students seeking teacher certification are required to complete extended internships during the Internship Year Studies Program. Interns who desire to be placed in secondary schools must pass the Michigan Test for Teacher Certification (MTTC) subject tests in their teaching major. Elementary interns, including Special Education and Child Development majors, must pass, at minimum, the MTTC tests appropriate to their grade band concentration. For the full criteria to be admitted to the internship year, see Prerequisites for Admission to the Internship Year Studies Program.

Although students are given an opportunity to express their preferences concerning possible internship placement sites, the placement of students in internships is the sole responsibility of the College of Education. The College will not honor student-arranged internship placements.

Each student's subject areas, the availability of field instructors, the voluntary willingness of schools to accept interns and visitors, and the College's commitment to providing service to public schools are considered in internship placement decisions. Given the number of factors that influence internship placement decisions, the College cannot guarantee that placements will be available in the vicinity of East Lansing or in a location that a student prefers.

Students are responsible for their transportation to and from internships. Students are responsible for costs associated with internships; e.g., moving to and living in the community in which a student's internship placement is located.
For additional information, students should contact the faculty who are responsible for internship placements.

Relationship of the Internship Year Studies Program to Master’s Degree Programs

Students may be admitted to the Internship Year Studies Program without being admitted to a master’s degree program. Students who are admitted to both the Internship Year Studies Program and a master’s degree program may pursue both programs simultaneously and may be allowed to apply 800–level courses from the Internship Year Studies Program to their master’s degree with the approval of the units that administer the master’s degree program.

Students in any master's program in the College of Education may apply a maximum of 12 credits earned through any combination of courses taken through lifelong education, graduate certification, or in transfer from another institution. Each program may determine if courses are appropriate for the master's program and may allow fewer than 12 credits to be applied to the specific master's program.

For additional information about the 800–level courses that are required for the Internship Year Studies Program, refer to the section on “Requirements for the Internship Year Studies Program.”
